

ASIAN SUMMER GARDEN

Cornell Botanic Gardens is developing a new Asian Summer Garden that will showcase tree and herbaceous peonies and other plants native to China, Japan, and Korea, highlighting the importance of these plants in East Asian cultures.

This Asian Summer Garden will be a unique feature of the Cornell Botanic Gardens, Cornell University campus, and the Ithaca/Tompkins County community. It will be both an important visitor attraction and will support the mission of the Cornell Botanic Gardens to inspire visitors to understand and appreciate plants and the cultures they sustain. It will foster stronger connections to Asian visitors and residents of our region, including the 35 percent of Cornell undergraduates who are Asian or of Asian heritage. The Asian Summer Garden will be designed to cultivate greater appreciation of Asian plants and understanding of Asian culture among visitors, a reciprocity we refer to as "horticultural diplomacy."

The Asian Summer Garden will evolve through a phased approach with continued support.

Phase 1 is set to begin in academic year 2026-2027, and construction costs are $2,675,000.

Phase 2 may commence in 2028, with construction costs of $900,000.

The Asian Summer Garden will feature many plants central to Asian horticulture and gardens. The most popular such plant is the peony, both tree peonies (Peonia suffruticosa) and herbaceous peonies (P. lactiflora). In China, where they are sometimes called the "Queen (or King) of flowers," peonies have been bred and cultivated for more than 2,000 years and in Japan, they feature prominently in art and ceramics. Featuring peonies will provide opportunities to interpret the links between horticulture and Asian culture and inspire visitors to leave with a greater appreciation of both the plants and greater cultural understanding.

Gifts to the Asian Summer Garden will support construction costs and the endowment needed to maintain the garden.

CULTIVATION CONSERVATION EDUCATION

PHASE 1 - GIVING OPPORTUNITIES

Entire Asian Summer Garden	$2,000,000
A special opportunity to name this beautiful and unique garden.
Entire Central Garden	$750,000
The Central Garden will be the centerpiece for peonies mixed with flowering perennials and ornamental grasses. Flowering shrubs and small flowering trees will frame the area so that the garden is slowly revealed as visitors walk through.
Pavilion	$500,000
Inspired by East Asian architectural design traditions, the pavilion will be the focal point of the Event Space and serves as a covered space for small gatherings and a stage for ceremonies and music.
Central Garden sections (each)	$85,000
Within the signature Central Garden, six beautifully designed sections will offer meaningful naming opportunities.
North and South entrance gates (each)	$50,000
Invoking the tradition of wabi gates in Japanese tea gardens and moon gates in ancient Chinese gardens, the north and south entrances will create a portal entry point for visitors as well as frame a unique view of the gardens.
Plant Collections (each)	$45,000
Conifer, Flowering Fruit and Hydrangea These special collections will feature a variety of plants within each of the species and will be spread throughout the garden.
Container Collections (each)	$15,000
Adding diversity to the hardy perennial collections, these 4-square-foot containers will enhance the hardscape elements found throughout the Asian Summer Garden. A combination of annuals and tender perennials will be featured, adding to the beauty of the gardens.

PHASE 2 - GIVING OPPORTUNITIES

Event Space

$450,000

The Event Space is the heart of the gardens, adjacent to the beautiful Mullestein Winter Garden, and is sized to accommodate large event tents.

North Entrance Grove

$250,000

The North Entrance Grove hosts a grove of trees and shrubs and features unconventional plantings creating a sense of horticultural curiosity and garden whimsy.

Perimeter Tree Planting

$175,000

This area will include specimen flowering cherry trees and groundcover plantings to provide a memorable moment for springtime special events.

South Lawn

$50,000

The lawn south of the Event Space is a place for visitors to wander, take a moment away from events, and serves as a calm green barrier between the Asian Summer Garden and the parking lot.

From gardens to gorges, everything that we offer at Cornell Botanic Gardens is made possible by friends who believe in our mission to connect plants and people.
